

ABSTRACT

System and method for maintaining a persistent-shopping-cart catalog. An embodiment of the invention is directed to a system and method for offering an item for sale on a website, allowing a user to browse the website via a client computer, generating a shopping cart, allowing the user to place the item in the shopping cart, and storing information about the item and the user in a single memory location in response to the browsing session being interrupted.